Church growth and evangelism challenge: Does your church initiative pass the Ten Tests?

The English Diocese of Liverpool has set ten 'tests' for any proposed initiatives to help churches avoid doing anything that might hinder the work of God's mission.

The diocese, which has 250 churches in both rural and urban settings in the north of the country, is said to be working towards "a sustainable, led and transforming Christian presence in every community in the diocese to enable all to act justly, love mercy and walk humbly with God."

Liverpool's Church Growth Team Leader Linda Jones explained that as part of this its synod agreed that Ten Tests should be set and used to measure the worth of any proposed initiatives:

Does each area of work or initiative:

1. Encourage growth numerically or in spirituality?
2. Support and reflect the church that we wish to become?
3. Affirm mutual support and collaboration within the diocese?
4. Strengthen relationships between parishes?
5. Recognise the ethos and the characteristics of the diocese particularly highlighting issues peculiar to the diocese.
6. Take appropriate account of the sustainability and viability issues of church buildings and congregations?

Bank account: Ev. Kreditgenossensch. Karlsruhe (BLZ 66060800), No. 305021103

7. Provide for accountability throughout every step of the initiative within the diocese and beyond?
8. Present an appropriate stewardship challenge?
9. Provide appropriate support for local decision-making?
10. Is the proposed system or process transparent and easily understood?

"We are now in the process of applying these 10 tests to any initiative that we are thinking about," explained Linda. "Hopefully by doing this it will encourage us to think collaboratively, look wider, and apply the concept of subsidiarity to enable us to be good stewards of God's giftings for the building up of his kingdom."

The need for such strategic, critical thinking cannot be underestimated when you take into account that the diocese stretches across a region that is both rural and urban, stretching from Southport in the North to Widnes in the South, from Liverpool in the West across to Wigan in the East, serving a population of 1.53 million in an area of 389 sq miles.

Linda added, "Ultimately we are aiming to see healthy churches at the heart of healthy communities; excellent church schools promoting Christian education; Christian disciples growing in faith, hope and number; outstanding Christian leaders for today and tomorrow; and vibrant and inclusive mixed economy churches in and from all traditions.

"We think that, with God's help, the ten tests will help us achieve just that."

Linda is also a member of the Anglican Communion's Evangelism and Church Growth Initiative that is a network of people across the world who together work to promote church growth and evangelism in Anglican and Episcopal churches across the globe. Information about Liverpool Diocese's Ten Tests and many other projects, initiatives and ideas for encouraging church growth and evangelism can be found in its latest newsletter Witness 6.7 here:

EICS Academy for Parish Leadership: Conference on Stewardship

From April 8-10 Saint Columban's bishop's committee members Roger Duthie and Todd Phillips attended the second annual European Institute of Christian Studies (EICS) Academy for Parish Leadership conference at Fürstenried Castle retreat house in Munich. This year's meeting was entitled "Stewards of God's Bounty: Models for Year-Round Stewardship".

The main speaker this year was Terry Parsons, an inspiring speaker and organizer who has worked as a magazine editor, marketing consultant to small businesses, director of development for a not-for-profit agency, and developed a training program for women executives.

With Terry's gentle direction, the delegates from Episcopal churches and missions all over Europe had a chance to share ideas about giving, finances, fellowship and how they can work together to help our congregations reach their goals. The seminar explored secrets to "Amazing Stewardship" as well as identifying "hierarchies of need" in response to churches' giving behavior. As Terry reminded us, no matter what our size, we can with God's help find ways to overcome obstacles and reach goals.

There was of course plenty of time for fellowship at the stately, spacious retreat house, which was once a seminary in which a certain Joseph Ratzinger once resided. The weekend concluded with a spirited service at the Ascension Church in Munich at which Bishop Whalon delivered the sermon.

As Terry concluded after a discussion of Jesus's miracle of feeding the 5,000: "Hey, we can do it. We can do anything. We're the bread and fish people!"

Services Resume at the Old-Catholic Church

As of February we have moved our regular Sunday services back to the Old-Catholic Church of the Resurrection (see below), currently at 11:30 a.m. the 1st Sunday of each month. This move is welcomed by many members who recall our past services in this lovely building. We are now privileged to also have an organist playing at our services and access to the church's fellowship hall for coffee and conversation immediately following.

90 Evangelism Resources Now Available to Anglicans Online

Anglican Communion members worldwide with access to the Internet can now take advantage of 90 evangelism resources on the Communion's website here: <http://www.anglicancommunion.org/ministry/mission/ecgi/resources/index.cfm>

The resources were pooled after the Kuala Lumpur meeting of the Communion's Evangelism and Church Growth Initiative's core organizing body. That the resources were selected by practitioners working in very different contexts in different countries means core group members are certain that visitors to the website will find some resources appropriate for their context.

"This is certainly not a definitive list," explained Anglican Communion Mission Director, John Kafwanka, "but it is a good start. The intention is to gather more resources and regularly update the list to keep it relevant."

The ECGI core group convenor, the Rt Rev Patrick Yu, Bishop of York-Scarborough in Toronto diocese said, "I am very pleased with the work the Core Group have done in Kuala Lumpur.

"We collected 90 resources from members: books, websites, organizations and activities which will be shared with people all over the Communion. What is more, we sorted them into broad biblical and evocative categories of 'Jerusalem', 'Judea and Samaria' and 'the ends of the earth' to help people make better use of them according to the contexts with which they best identify. Since some resources fit in more than one category, we have over 120 entries."

Much of Witness6.7, the March 2011 edition of the newly renamed ECGI newsletter features articles related to the core group meeting and a fuller report of the meeting also appears on the web here: <http://www.anglicancommunion.org/ministry/mission/ecgi/documents/index.cfm>

First Communion Materials

The Mission has purchased several copies of the Anglican first communion guide “I Belong”, including children’s workbooks and resource material for parents and leaders. Several families in our congregation have been working through the material with their own children, and Father Hanns (officially retired, we should not forget) has graciously agreed to conduct the final meeting with the candidates for first communion before they partake in the ceremony.

Anyone interested in the “I Belong” materials is encouraged to contact Todd Phillips (see page 8).

“The Eagle and the Dove”

Anyone who would like to know more about our Patron Saint might look into “The Eagle and the Dove - The Spirituality of the Celtic Saint Columbanus”, by Katherine Lack, Triangle SPCK, 2000, usually about £5.50 + shipping. Ask the Priest or Todd Phillips how to get this most valuable little book.

“...call the parson too”. The Church is always available to those who desire her ministrations in time of sickness. But we often do not know who does. So if you know of someone who is sick or otherwise housebound, and would like a priest to visit her or him in order to talk to him or to receive communion, the laying on of hands and/or anointing (cf. Letter of James 5:14), do let the Priest in Charge know as soon as possible.

Mission Statement

Saint Columban's Mission is a self-supporting congregation in the Anglican Communion under the jurisdiction of the Bishop in Charge of The Convocation of Episcopal Churches in Europe (Episcopal Church in the United States of America). It

The Mission is a member of the Council of Anglican Episcopal Churches in Germany, which organizes the co-operation of Anglican and Episcopal chaplaincies, and congregations in this country. It is also a member of the Arbeitsgemeinschaft Christlicher Kirchen (Council of Christian Churches) in Karlsruhe.
